

and one who is very inventive. For us to treat security matters such as airport security as a routine kind of task that can be dealt with in routine kinds of training and, therefore, is eligible for routine kinds of labor relations between management—in this case, our leading security agencies—and labor—in this case, those who are on the frontline of security for our Nation—would be foolish.

For that reason, again, Mr. President, I would oppose this bill if this provision does not come out.

With that, I yield the floor.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BROWN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. OBAMA). Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BROWN. Mr. President, I yield myself 8 minutes of the Democratic time.

FDA REGULATION OF TOBACCO

Mr. BROWN. Mr. President, every year, 450,000 Americans die from smoking-related illnesses. That means tobacco companies have to find 450,000 new customers every year. Here is how they do it.

There is a new ad campaign from Camel that targets young girls. This is part of a mailer that Camel sent to young women around the country, especially aimed at young women, calling Camel cigarettes “light and luscious.” You will notice the resemblance of this mailing to a popular perfume. This is Camel No. 9. Inside this box—this is inside the mailing—is something that looks like a cigarette box. These are not actually cigarettes. They are not allowed to do that under law. But if you open this, you will see Camel is offering two for one, two packs of cigarettes for the price of one.

In Ohio, 20 percent or 134,000 high school students smoke, and each year more than 18,000 children under the age of 18 become daily smokers. The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention estimates that almost 300,000 Ohio children under the age of 18 who start smoking now will die prematurely as a result. Almost 300,000 children who start smoking now will die prematurely as a result.

Our Nation’s youth, frankly, are almost certainly not aware of these staggering statistics when they try their first cigarette, but we are aware of it. If we are not, we should be. It is our responsibility to make sure our children are safe and don’t fall victim to these unhealthy addictions—addictions with deadly outcomes. It is our responsibility to make sure our children are safe and don’t fall victim to unhealthy addictions.

FDA regulation of tobacco products, legislation introduced by Senator KEN-NEDY, is not only necessary to protect our kids, it will improve the overall health of our Nation and save countless lives. FDA regulation is necessary because most cigarette manufacturers have proved time and again they have no desire to take the course of responsible action. Instead, in an act of morally reprehensible profiteering that contravenes a multistate tobacco agreement struck in 1998, cigarette manufacturers are once again using advertising campaigns to lure teenagers into a deadly habit.

These unscrupulous business practices especially prey on girls in particular. As a father of three daughters, I take personal offense to this kind of advertising that glamorizes cigarettes. Their latest gimmick, again, as I said, is a mailing of a takeoff on a popular perfume. They are sending these out, I presume, to hundreds of thousands of young women.

It strains the imagination that this ad campaign and these kinds of two-for-one coupons—it strains the imagination to think that this is aimed at anyone other than 15- and 16- and 17-year-old girls. These images make their way into millions of homes across the country through these mailers, and they reveal, as I said, a prize of two-for-one coupons, even though cigarettes are legal only for 18-year-olds and older. Cigarette manufacturers are literally investing in the premature deaths of our daughters.

It is up to Congress to put a stop to it. Lung-related cancers are the fastest growing and now the leading cause of cancer death among women. As elected officials, we have an obligation to ensure the health and safety of those who sent us to the Senate. As parents, we have a moral imperative to ensure our children are afforded the best chance for a bright start. There is nothing “light” or “luscious” about dying from lung cancer.

Every year, smoking costs our Nation more than $96 billion in health care costs. The real costs, of course, are the 450,000 lives lost every single year to smoking-related illnesses.

In my home State of Ohio, health care costs directly caused by smoking topped $4.3 billion, $1.5 billion of which is covered by our State Medicaid Program—the taxpayers. This is a drain on our health care system. It is a drain on our local communities. It is a drain on our Federal and State budgets. Congress must grant, under the Kennedy proposal, the FDA authority to regulate tobacco products.

We have a responsibility to our Nation to ensure that children are safer and they are not the victims of suggestive marketing by tobacco companies. Congress has debated the issue of FDA authority over tobacco for nearly a decade. It is time to finish the debate and take action to protect children, protect young women, girls, from this kind of advertising, from these kinds of campaigns because if we take the right kinds of action, it will save literally hundreds of thousands of lives.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Republican leader is recognized.

HONORING OUR ARMED FORCES

LANCE CORPORAL DESHON E. OTEY

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, like every one of my colleagues, I stand in awe of the brave men and women who have volunteered to take up arms and defend our country. Some are called to make the ultimate sacrifice. And so today I ask the Senate to pause in loving memory of LCpl DeShon E. Otey of Radcliff, KY. He was 24 years old.

Lance Corporal Otey, a marine, died on June 21, 2004, while serving with an elite sniper team sent on a crucial mission in Ramadi, Iraq. Otey and three other marines entered the town to target the dangerous terrorists who had turned it into one of the most hostile in the country.

To this day we can not be sure how tragedy struck Otey on this final mission. After headquarters could not make contact with his team, other marines were sent to find out what happened.

Lance Corporal Otey was found killed, shot in the torso. The other three soldiers had met the same fate, and their weapons had been taken by the enemy.

Just 3 months before his death, Lance Corporal Otey had survived a particularly brutal attack by the terrorists—again, in Ramadi, the site of many difficult battles. Then, Otey was the sole survivor out of all the men in his humvee.

For his actions as a marine, Lance Corporal Otey earned numerous medals and awards, including the Purple Heart and the Combat Action Ribbon.

Mr. President, though we mourn the loss of this hero’s life, we would not mourn how he lived it. Lance Corporal Otey’s mother Robin Mays tells us he wanted to join the Marines for about as long as she could remember. “All he ever dreamed about was being a marine,” she says. “He was the consummate marine—reserved, soft-spoken, would only speak when spoken to. He lived for the Marines.”

As a student at North Hardin High School, in Hardin County, KY, DeShon was an amateur boxer who had several bouts in nearby Louisville, KY. He was also a lineman for the North Hardin High football team.

But even as a high-school student, DeShon was preparing for the rigorous life of a marine. He tested for both the Marine Corps and the Air Force, earning high scores. He worked with a Marine recruiter, and sometimes the two would go off to participate in war games.

DeShon proved to have great prowess with a weapon. He was eventually selected to be a sniper, a highly respected position that comes with a lot of responsibility and a lot of training. He went on to earn the Rifle Marksman Badge and the Pistol Marksman Badge.

Of course, DeShon had other interests as well. His mother remembers
